

Inigo Quilez :: articles :: function 2009 - behind Elevated

I didn't plan to go to many parties this year. In fact I only wanted to attend Breakpoint, mainly because of real life issues and money saving. However, in the last minute I remembered last years Function and I decided to attend and enjoy the fantastic atmosphere there, once again. In fact this was the last party I will be able to attend for a loooong time, so I was twice as happy when I was invited to give a seminar at it.

The idea was to speak a bit about how "elevated", the last 4k intro in which I took part, was created. I tried to make a presentation that both coders of all levels and people with no-technical ambitions can enjoy. In the end I quite run out of time to prepare it, but still I believe I managed to put some interesting material together. You tell me.

Click here to download the presentation.

inigo quilez - learning computer graphics since 1994